WHAT ARE QR BARCODES?

QR BarCodes are two-dimensional barcodes that can be easily scanned with a mobile device to get to your online content.

QR stands for Quick Response. It refers your prospects to your website, blog, product or service instantly when they click on, or scan the picture or Code.

Advertising QR BarCodes is the most powerful way to show prospective customers your offer. Brands can add a QR BarCode to a billboard or magazine that sends users to its website or a coupon or landing page immediately. For the user, this takes away the hassle of typing in a long URL, or jotting it down on paper. The advertiser benefits from real-time results in which the user immediately visits their website rather than waiting until they get home, or worse, forgetting about it altogether.

Another use is through virtual stores where a large touch screen is in a place the public can use, such as a plaza or subway station. Shoppers can scan items with their cellphones and get the items delivered at a chosen time and location.

QR BarCodes are often used to transfer cryptocurrency, including Bitcoin. Some cemeteries around the world have started adding QR BarCodes to tombstones to make it easier for visitors to locate the gravesite.

It's a good practice to only scan QR BarCodes from companies that you trust because of security concerns. A hacker could link a QR BarCode to a malicious website that looks legit, but instead phishes your personal information when you try to log in. Also be sure to check the URL before inputting your credentials, something you should already be doing anyway.

HOW DO I SCAN A QR BARCODE?

To scan a QR BarCode, you first need to have a scanner app on your cellphone. A large selection of these can be downloaded for free in the various app stores on your phone. When you have installed one, start the application and keep the camera of your smartphone over the QR BarCode to scan it. If the Code is readable, the encoded information will be accessed automatically.

Because QR Codes are so versatile, they can be used in any print or online advertising campaign. If your goal is to increase your social media following, you can place the Social Media QR Code in shops to lead customers to any and all of your social media platforms. If you're promoting a mobile app, the App QR Code can go on your website banner and printed flyers. Event planners can use the Event QR Code to provide details about an upcoming event such as the date, location, parking, dress code, etc. There's a QR Code type that can match any ad campaign.

QR Code Ideas for Promotions
